PROFITABLE MINING HERE

For a Good Many Years to Come is Prof. Ulrich's View of The District—A Demand For The Mixed Ore—A Valuable Deposit of Sulphur.

MACHINERY CONSTANTLY COMING !

Prof. E. O. Ulrich, of the U. S. Geographical Survey, has been here some days, making a hurried review of the district, picking up the odds and ends and making some verifications. The work accomplished and the developments made since he was here last summer, gathering data for the survey, has been of especial interest to him. Before leaving for Washington Tuesday, to a representative of the PRESS he said:

"The district has great possibilities. I was favorably impressed with my first survey, a report of which was published in the PRESS twelve years ago; the developments have strengthened my then favorable opinion.

"In all mining districts there are disappointments and successes; mines that do not yield a profit and mines that pay handsomely. The same thing is happening here. You have some fine properties and the ratio of disappointments is no greater here than in other mining districts. Developments will show other good properties, and I shall confidently expect to hear of substantial, profitable mining here for a good many years to come."

"When will your report and map be published?" is a question that Prof. Ulrich had to answer some hundreds of times while here. He answered the question for the PRESS as follows:

"I expect to have it in the hands of the printer within the next month, and the work of printing will be pushed as rapidly as possible. The Department suffers no unavoidable delays in publications of this character, but the maps must be lithographed and the other work also takes time; it may be some months before the publication is issued."

Prof. Ulrich had only a few days at his disposal this trip, and we learn with regret that this is probably his last visit to the district, as his line of work in the department takes him to other fields. Prof. Ulrich made the initiatory geographical survey of the district back in the eighties, and his report is the foundation of the present thriving mining industries of the three counties. That brief but comprehensive report, prepared for the PRESS at a time when the State ceased to make provision for continuing her geological work has been worth thousands of dollars to the people of the three counties, and the material returns that will yet come can not be computed. Prof. Ulrich's name has been prominently associated with our mining affairs all along. His personal work here as a representative of the U. S. Survey has been especially valuable, though his report may not appear for some time yet. He has been affable and approachable, and in a personal way has given the people much valuable information and help in the work of development, and there is a general regret that he will not come this way again.

HOW AN ASSAY IS MADE.

In the case of gold ores about an ounce—more exactly 29.167 milligrams, because there are 29.167 troy ounces in an avordupois ton—is fused at a white heat in a crucible, with suitable fluxes, including pure oxide of lead, and the result of fusion is a lead button containing all the gold and silver at the bottom of the crucible, and over it a slag that is entirely free of precious metals. The button is then "cupelled" at a bright red heat, in a bone ash cup or cupel, until all the lead has oxidized and soaked into the bone ash, leaving a clean bead of silver and gold, containing about 98 per cent of all the gold and silver that was in the sample, as proved by thousands of tests made under all kinds of conditions. The button is then weighed on a delicate balance, capable of turning with one hundredth of a milligram or about one six thousandth of a grain.

Gold and silver and often lead ores are assayed by fusion, which is generally called the dry assay. Copper, zinc, and nearly all other metals excepting sometimes mercury, tin, cobalt and nickel, are usually assayed by "wet" methods. That is to say a grain or about one-thirtieth part of an ounce of the ore ground in an agate mortar to impalpable fineness, is boiled in a vessel of the most refractory Berlin porcelain, with aqua regia or other strong acids, until all the metals have gone into complete solution. Then follows a systematic separation of the elements in the solution by precipitating one after another by means of appropriate chemical reagents, and successive filtrations until a solution is finally obtained containing all the metal to be estimated, in such a chemical combination that it can be determined exactly, either by precipitation, filtration, drying and weighing, or else by voluntary analysis, in which last case a suitable reagent of very exactly known strength is dropped into the solution from finely granulated tube until the whole of the metal is either precipitated or oxidized, as the case may be.

In the case of jack, or zinc ore, for example, the element of value is the metallic zinc or spelter contained in the ore. The purist light colored yellow "jack," contains 66.9 per cent metallic zinc and 33.1 per cent sulphur. There are many varieties, however, carrying, in combination more or less iron, lead, cadmium, nickel, sometimes a little tin, or the rare metal, indium, and organic matter, so that even if the ore is quite free from sand or rock particles, etc., it rarely carries as much as 66 per cent pure zinc.

Other ores of zinc are: Calamine, or hydrous silicate of zinc, 51.2 per cent. Willemite, or anhydrous silicate of zinc, carrying, when pure, 58.6 per cent zinc. Smithsonite, or carbonate of zinc dry bone, carrying when pure 52.0 per cent of zinc.

Hydrozincite, or hydrous carbonate of zinc, carrying when pure 60.4 per cent zinc. Zincite, or red oxide of zinc, carrying when pure, 80.2 per cent zinc. If metallic zinc, or spelter, which is the commercial name of zinc, as it comes in slabs from the smelters, were worth $6.00 per 100 pounds in St. Louis, a ton, or 2,000 pounds of ore assaying 60 per cent zinc, and therefore carrying 1,200 pounds of zinc, would be worth 12 times $6, or $72, less the freight, the cost of treatment with profit included, and the loss of metal incurred in the process of distilling the zinc in the retorts.

THE REED MINING COMPANY.

In the shaft being sunk on block E of the Reed Mining company's land, adjoining the city of Marion the top of an apparently great vein of sulphur has been uncovered. Sulphur is so universally in demand by the fertilizing manufacturers for the production of sulphuric acid to acidulate the phosphate rock that it seems to be a very fortunate discovery, both for the Reed Mining company and the country generally. A sample from the extreme top as first found was sent to Waring & Son for analysis, the returns being some 500 pounds of pure sulphur to ton of clay, including a small percentage of zinc.

The showing of this quantity of zinc with the large proportion of sulphur indicates that at some greater depth a very large body of sulphide of zinc will be mined. This one body of ore would in almost any other section of country, cause general excitement and a strong advance in the stock. In this wonderland of mineral veins, however, it is of such frequent occurrence to have great bodies of mineral revealed by the pick and shovel that we accept it as a matter of course.

It is intended to commence the shipment of this sulphur to the phosphate works of Swift & Co. at Atlanta, Ga., within the next thirty days. The works are owned by Swift & Co., the great Chicago packers, who have acid plants at St. Louis and Chicago.

Sulphur is jobbed by the producers at the price of $2.50 per hundred pounds, or at the rate of $50 per ton.

Of course a sulphur plant on the Reed Mining company's property would not only be feasible, but very profitable, and that will likely come in the future.

MUST LIST LEASES AND LANDS.

Section 4039 of the Kentucky Statutes make it obligatory on the part of owners of lands or leases of realty who reside outside of the county in which such property is situated, to file a descriptive list with the clerk of the county court on or before August 15th of each year following such purchase or lease. As there is no possible defense to an action for recovering the penalty prescribed without its remission by the Governor, parties interested will govern themselves accordingly.

The following is the section referred to:

"That it shall be the duty of the persons owning any lands, mineral rights, or standing (branded) trees of any kind whatever, on the lands of another, or any coal, oil or gas privileges, by lease or otherwise, or any interest therein in any counties of this commonwealth, other than the county in which they reside, or if they reside out of this state to file a descriptive list with the clerk of the county court of the county in which said property is situated, under oath showing the number of any such branded trees, giving the kind of each and upon whose land or lands the same are situated; also the number of acres of lands, mineral rights, coal, oil or gas rights, and the actual location, by metes and bounds courses and distances of each tract giving the nearest resident to each, on or before the fifteenth day of August one thousand eight hundred and ninety-four, from which descriptive list or lists the assessor of the county in which same is filed will list the same for taxes, each year at its fair cash value; and any person failing to comply with the requirements of this act shall be fined for each of these failures one hundred dollars and costs.

There is a place in our wide and widening field of economics for everything nature has constructed. We may be puzzled for a time to find the niche for some article, but the genius of man eventually rises to the occasion. We have been puzzled over the separation of the compound, lead, zinc and spar, holding that this trio must be separated before either had a commercial value. There is a great quantity of this blonde in the district, and it has been apparent that a fortune awaits the man who successfully makes the separation. Now comes a demand for the ore just as nature had moulded it. Messrs. H. C. Todd and Charles Mayr, representing a Chicago manufacturing house, were here some days last week looking over the field to ascertain the probable quantity of this ore obtainable. They visited several of the mines and were, we were informed, gratified to find the outlook for supplying their demands so promising. They have been to other zinc fields looking for this ore, but found nothing so nearly approaching the article wanted as the ore that has been a problem to our miners. This investigation will doubtless lead to the opening of a satisfactory market for such of this ore as the separator will not need or can not use.

The review of the Joplin market for last week is as follows:

Beginning this year with a reserve stock of 12,000 tons of zinc ore, the purchasing agents of the various smelters each succeeding week have encroached upon the reserve until today there is probably less than 3,000 tons remaining.

This indicates that the output has been 9,000 tons less than the shipments so far this year. Added to this the other fact that the shipments are 13,585 less than for the same period of last year, it is seen that the output is really over 25,000 tons less than last year. Many things have conspired to cause this great decrease, beginning with the coal famine, followed by the worst floods for eighteen years.

During the week the demand for zinc has been exceptionally large, and while the output reached about 5,000 tons, the shipments aggregated 5,537 tons. The situation is becoming almost as acute as a year ago, when the reserve stock was lowered to about 2,000 tons, and producers are looking for an advance in the price of zinc to come as it did a year ago, when it sold at $42 a ton.

Messrs. Cruce and Steger are developing their lead property in Union county, Ill., and the work is bringing gratifying results. Both lead and zinc are strong features of the property. Messrs. A. C. and Lee Cruce of Ardmore, I. T., will probably take interests in the property.

SPECIFIC GRAVITIES.

The following table of specific gravities of our various ores will be found valuable both to the proprietor and mill owner. It will be observed that when two ores are closely allied and bear practically the same specific gravity no known means of mechanical separation can be made available:

Galena, lead ore,	7.50
Carbonate of lead,	6.50
Iron pyrites,	5.
Barite,	4.60
Zinc carbonate,	4.40
Zinc blonde,	4.05
Zinc silicate,	4.
Fluorspar,	3.18
Calc spar,	2.72
Quartz,	2.65
Gypsum,	2.33
China clay.	2.21

Mr. Stewart Givens is putting in a larger engine on the Corn place this week. His additions are of a substantial nature, and indicate the presence of a large body of ore, as a conservative, well informed miner like Mr. Givens would not be making these expenditures without the best of grounds for belief in remunerative returns.

THE SCHOOL PER CAPITA

Fixed at $2.60--Increase of 28 Cents Over 1902.

AVAILABLE FUND $1,947,165.19.

Frankfort, Ky., July 15.—The per capita for the school year, declared by State Superintendent H. V. McChesney, on estimates furnished by the Auditor, is $2.60. This is on an apportionment to the school fund of $1,947,165.19, and is an increase of 28 cents over the per capita of the year 1902:

The estimate on which the per capita is declared is as follows:

731,841 pupil children as shown by reports of school officers, at $2,60 per pupil, $1,902,786.60.

Amount to be distributed to counties as interest on county bonds, $22,918.85.

Balance to meet expenses of the office and possible corrections in the census, $21,459.74.

Making a total of $1,947,165.19.

The increase in the per capita from $2.32, the amount paid last year, is due to two conditions. The per capita last year was materially reduced by the loss of tax on State banks, resulting from an act of the General Assembly refunding to these banks taxes they had paid under the old law, in excess of the amount they should have paid. This act was passed after the Court of Appeals had decided that these banks had paid more than their just proportion of the states revenues under the old law referred to. The refunding was done by way of remitting the taxes on these banks last year.

The second reason for the increase is an increase of about $212,000 in the sheriff's revenue for the present year. The per capita for the four years of the present administration has been as follows: In 1900 it was $2.45; in 1901, 2.50; in 1902, 2.32; in 1903, 2.60. If the State bank tax matter had not affected the situation last year the per capita for the four years would have been as nearly uniform as it is possible to make it, made up in part as it is by certain funds that fluctuate from year to year.

The difference between the highest and the lowest for the four years is only 28 cents. During the Republican administration the per capita fluctuated from $2.20, the amount paid in 1896, and 1897 to $2.70, the amount paid in 1899.

It will be remembered that by holding the per capita down to $2.20 in 1896 and 1897 and to $2.30 in 1898, a tremendous surplus was created, enabling the Superintendent of Public Instruction to declare a much higher per capita in 1899 than the revenues of the year justified.

During the four years of the Democratic administration the per capita has averaged eleven and three quarter cents higher than during the Republican administration preceding.

This difference of eleven and three-quarter cents, in the average per capita has made an increase of about $86,000 annually in the amount paid the teachers of the state, aside from the question of keeping the per capita more nearly uniform, and paying to the teachers of each year the money due them.

Negro Babies Change Color.

A German physician, who had spent several years at Klein-Popo, in the African Togoland, says that the stage of color through which negro babies pass in the equatorial regions are as follows: At birth they are the same color as European infants. After two or three months the skin turns a lilac color. Ten days later it is a light chestnut shade, and it is only at the end of three or four months that the skin becomes completely black.

THE SOUTH

Best Place For Negro, Says Booker Washington.

Booker T. Washington was given an ovation at the celebration of the anniversary of the founding of the Colored Congregation church at Atlanta, when he spoke on "The Home, Its Influence in the Settlement of the Race Problem." Gov. Terrell and the Mayor occupied places on the stand.

Washington appealed for harmony between the races, and declared the South the best place for the negro. He said in part: "Let us all learn a lesson from one of the greatest of southerners, Wade Hampton, of South Carolina, when on his dying bed he uttered the words: 'God bless all of my people, white and black.'

Two recent occurrences emphasize the truth that the negro has strong and wise friends here in the very heart of the south. I refer first to the zeal that some of the members of the white race in my own state of Alabama have shown in bringing to proper punishment those guilty of establishing a peonage system under which members of my race have been the sufferers.

"I refer also to the action of the Georgia legislature, now in session in refusing to accede to the unwise and unjust division of the public school fund. Few people are wise enough to understand the economic value of justice, even when considered from the higher point of view. When compared with the limitations and cruelties inflicted upon the Jews in Southern parts of Europe in the present time the future of the black man seems much more encouraging.

"The time has come here in the south when I believe the very highest type of southern white men and women are going more and more to take a hand in the elevation of the blacks at their doors. In many sections this work is already in progress, and we hail it as the dawning of a brighter day.

"In conclusion, as I have said, whites and blacks are to reside together in this country permanently, and we should lose no opportunity to cultivate in every manly way the greatest harmony between the races. Whoever, North or South, black or white, stir up strife needlessly by word or deed is an enemy to both races and to his country."

Facts About Popes of Rome.

St. Peter claimed to be the first Pope, or the first bishop of Rome was martyred in Rome June 29th, in the year 67. He is said to have ruled the diocese for twenty-five years.

St. Linus was the second Pope. Elected in the year 67, died in the year 78.

Boniface the II. was the first Pope who was not a saint. He was succeeded by John II.

The fifty-six first Popes were all canonized.

Pope Gregory the Great was the sixty-sixth Pope. He was elected in the year 590, and ruled for 14 years.

The Italian name of Leo XIII. is Leone, not Leo.

Clement XI. was the two hundred and fifteenth Pope, in the regular list. He was elected in the year 1700. Since then there have been thirteen Pontiffs, all of them Italians.

The title "Supreme Pontiff," or "Pontifex Maximus," is derived from the ancient Roman head of the Committee of Bridge Builders.

It is purely civic origin, adopted by the Popes as being most fitting, in a figurative way, to their high office.

The fence around the St. Louis exposition grounds will be six miles long, and there are surface indications that St. Louis landlords are preparing to elongate the legs of visitors to match.

BIG BUILDINGS

For Live Stock at Kentucky State Fair--Great Preparations for Big Fall Attraction.

The preparations now in progress, both at the Louisville headquarters and at Owensboro indicate that the State Fair, which begins at Owensboro September 21, will be the biggest event of the kind ever attempted south of the Ohio river.

Aside from the long and splendid list of free amusements, to which has now been added the famous Dr. Carver and his show and also races, without pool selling, the fair will be an educator to all persons interested in Live Stock, Agriculture, Horticulture, Mining and Household work.

Contracts have just been let for nine cattle barns with a capacity of 800 cattle; five stables with a capacity of 500 horses; two buildings with a capacity of 300 sheep; two buildings with a capacity of 400 swine; one poultry house with a capacity of 1500 birds; one mineral exhibit hall, which is a new feature, and one office building. The amphitheater has a capacity of 10,000, and is one of the largest in the United States.

FIGURIFS ON LYNCHING.

Beginning in 1885, the Chicago Tribune has kept a detailed record of lynch law operations in the United States. Up to Monday last Delaware was one of five states in which mob vengeance had not prevailed over ordinary processes during seventeen and a half years of record.

Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Utah now remain on the honorable list of exemption.

Mob law is thus shown to be the distinct manifestation of no section. The Far West has dealt out a great deal of it to horse and cattle thieves. But out of 2,516 lynchings recorded by the Tribune up to the end of 1900, the South furnished 2,080. Of the victims 1,678 were negroes, 801 were whites, 21 Indians, 9 Chinese and 7 Mexicans. Summary death was the penalty, mob-administered, for 114 different offenses, murder and criminal assault heading the list.

One man was lynched for slapping a girl, another for jilting a girl. Two paid the penalty for writing insulting letters, two for gambling three "for being unpopular" and two for practicing "voodooism." In 1885, 1888 and 1892 horse stealing in the West led to a notable swelling of the lists of summary executions.

Even as late as 1901 the lynchings in the Union were seventeen more than the legal executions, the number being 135 and 118 respectively.

More than fifty women have been victims of lynching parties.

The Southern States with largest number of recorded lynchings are Mississippi, Texas, Louisiana, Georgia, Alabama and Tennessee. Indiana leads in the North, with 36 mob murders. New Jersey had a lynching in 1886, New York had one in 1892 and another in 1896. Connecticut had one in 1886.

Any impression that the practice of lynch law is dying out, and that no steps are necessary to restrain it is corrected by the Tribune tables. There were ninety lynchings in 1881 and 135, as stated, in 1901. Between these years the number shifted back and forth going as high as 235 in 1892.

People who have taken note of the old saying that "blood is thicker than water" have some grounds for believing, if they take note of current events, that it is also cheaper.

It is a natural presumption that the republican executive of Indiana, who is shielding ex-Governor Taylor from justice, is terribly outraged by the disregard for law shown in Breathitt county.

CUMBERLAND RIVER.

Improvement--Expenditure of $900,000 Recommended.

A dispatch from Nashville says: "Capt. W. J. Barden, of the United States Corps of Engineers, has completed his annual report for fiscal year ending June 30th. In this report a recommendation is made to the Chief Engineer for the fiscal year ending June 30th, 1906, of $400,000 for the Cumberland river, below Nashville, and $500,000 above Nashville. The report also announces the expenditure during the past fiscal year of $31,839.93 for the river below Nashville and $26,998.44 on the Cumberland river above Nashville.

VETERANS PASSING AWAY.

The death of R. E. Marsh at the Confederate Home, being the fourteenth that has occurred there during the short period of the institution's existence, shows that the home was not established too soon. Any one can find a place to die if it be only under the friendly shelter of tree's foliage, on the sunny wayside, or in a hovel, alone and friendless; but noble people kindly prepared a home where the deserving survivors of the lost cause could die surrounded by comforts and friends, being tenderly nursed during illness and mourned in death, seeing to it, too, that their bodies find a more fitting resting place than "the potter's field."

Some years ago when Gen. Gordon was a candidate for the senate he answered the charges that the ex-Confederates were monopolizing the offices with a pathetic assurance that such complaints could not long be heard, as there would then be no ex-Confederates to bar the way and vex the ambition of the younger and aspiring elements who seek promotion through the thorny paths of politics.

A still more suggestive incident occurred in Virginia long after the war. There was found wandering aimlessly about the streets of Richmond a decrepit and demented man. Some one was attracted by his somewhat bent but soldierly figure. He was taken to the office of the late Dr. McGuire who was Stonewall Jackson's surgeon. That famous and truly scientific physician soon discovered that a part of the poor fellow's skull was pressing upon his brain. He realized at once the nature of the sufferer's malady and lifted that part of the skull, restoring the brain at once to its normal action. The relieved patient looked around in bewilderment for several minutes and then said, "The army was at Manassas yesterday; where is it today?"

A fragment of shell had struck this now old veteran at the second battle of Manassas and his brain had ceased for that moment to perform its natural functions. Not wishing that he should be taken to a charitable institution his friends, though poor, had cared for him; but he had escaped his vigilance and wandered to Richmond.

It may well be asked, "Where is the army today?"—where are those who so bravely and swiftly followed Lee and Jackson and Johnston and Forrest and Morgan? How many survive and how many are sleeping in their silent tents upon fame's eternal camping ground?"—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Mr. Rockefeller says that whenever he wants anything he prays for it. This recalls the story of the darkey who prayed for a Thanksgiving turkey, but in vain. Then he prayed that he might be sent out to get a turkey, and there were feathers in his back yard before sun-up.

Mobs and riots are not unexpected in a state whose chief executive persists in shielding fugitives from justice.

CARRSVILLE DRY.

Votes Down Liquor By Handsome Majority.

By the decisive vote of 39 to 20 the town of Carrsville went "dry" again last Saturday.

The election to decide whether or not liquor should be sold in the town was ordered several weeks ago by County Judge Evans after a petition signed by about forty of its voters—decidedly more than 25 per cent. of legal voters of the town, as the law requires—had been filed in open court.

Not much interest was manifested and the "wets" seemed to have things all they way until about one week before the election when the opposition went to work, and the result shows the effect of their labors. Both sides, it is said, fought every inch of ground and only five or six voters failed to vote.

The "dryas," of course, are very jubilant over their victory.

The town has been "dry" for several years and will remain so for at least three years to come. —Smithland Banner.

THE CORK CAME OUT.

The follow is going the rounds of the press:

Senators Blackburn and Lindsey, of Kentucky, were once traveling together through the Alleghany mountains. Blackburn went into the smoking room and returned in a few minutes looking so much depressed that Lindsay asked:

"What's the matter, Joe?"

"Why, I've lost the better part of my baggage," said Blackburn, in heartbroken tones.

"Was it stolen or did you leave it behind?"

"Worse than either—the cork came out."

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

Whereas, it hath pleased God to remove from earth our beloved friend and neighbor, Stephen Nation, a young and useful citizen much esteemed for his many excellencies of mind and heart. He was especially endeared to us by reason of his long and efficient service in the Sunday school, his eminent kindness to all and especially to the young. As a citizen, although so young in years, he was useful and faithful in every public trust.

Serving with all diligence and care in the office of postmaster and deputy clerk. He was courteous and full of kindness.

Although an invalid and a great sufferer for a number of years, he was cheerful and uncomplaining, and often rendered valuable service to others while his own sufferings were indescribable.

His evident esteem for Christ and his cause; his reverent regard for the church and Sunday school, together with his zeal for the good of all, and the moral well being of the young, are evidences to us, that God was working in him to will and to do of his own good pleasure.

He was suddenly called away, but we trust he was ready, as he told his mother a short time before his death that he was conscious of peace with his Savior. We are thereby solemnly admonished to "be ready," for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh.

Wherefore resolved, that we tender to the bereaved and heartbroken parents and kindred, the sincere sympathy of the Hebron Sunday school in this, their awful sorrow, and assure them we shall always lovingly cherish the memory of their departed loved one.

Resolved: We bow with submission to this sad dispensation of God's providence, and lovingly urge the many friends and associates of our departed friend to "be ready."

PASSES AWAY.

Mr. R. A. Moore a Victim of Typhoid Fever.

A POPULAR MAN.

Wednesday morning, at 3:20 o'clock, Mr. Robert A. Moore passed peacefully from life at his home in this city, after an illness of typhoid fever of more than three weeks duration.

Three weeks ago Mr. Moore was confined to his room and his condition gradually grew worse until the end.

The funeral services will be conducted at the family residence this morning at 10 o'clock, Rev. Joiner of the Methodist church officiating. The interment will take place at the new cemetery.

Mr. Moore was in his forty-fifth year. He was engaged in the drug business before he became a commercial traveler. A wife and four children, Kittie, Edna, Grace and Thomas, survive him. His eldest son Clyde, died in this city three years ago.

Mr. Moore has been employed as traveling salesman for a number of years, and was widely and favorably known throughout this section. In his death the city loses one of its best and most popular citizens, and the loss sustained by the family can not be expressed. He was a man of noble character, big hearted and affable, he won the esteem and friendship of those around him. His death is a loss that will be felt far and near, for in the death of a man like Mr. Moore a splendid citizen, a devoted Christian, a true friend and a loving father and husband is lost.

MR. ROBERT H. DEAN

Delivers an Interesting Lecture at the State College.

Mr. R. H. Dean, weather Observer of the Government Bureau, located at the State College, delivered an interesting lecture last night in Science Hall, on the College grounds, says The Daily Lexington Leader. His lecture was on birds and was greatly enjoyed. Mr. Dean said in part:

Birds have in every age of history and by every class of people, been regarded with admiration and wonder. They have been casually observed by the common people, carefully studied by naturalists, sweetly sung by poets, and eaten with a relish by the epicureans.

Their forms, varying from the grotesque to the most graceful known in nature; plumage shading from dull and dirty to brilliant and iridescent; their movements rising from the slow and gawky to the swift and rhythmic; their peculiar methods of home building; their mysterious migrations; their notes, ranging from the idiotic laugh of owl and loon to the ethereal music of Hermit and Woodthrush, appeal alike to the eye and the ear and the emotions.

How are we to know the birds? The method pursued in studying them depends on the end to be accomplished. It is assumed that you desire to know the live birds, their names, their habits and their songs, and that you desire to record what you may learn that others may share your pleasure and knowledge.

The first requisite to the successful study of birds, without a gun, is a note book; the second, a field or opera glass; the third, a book of reference. With these and a little enthusiasm and love for out of doors, you are equipped for learning the names of most of our birds, and much of their habits and peculiarities.

The note book may be of any convenient size and form; what goes in it is of vastly more importance than the kind of book. The book should be attached to the person and a pencil attached to the book. A good field or opera glass is an essential requisite; one with high magnifying power is necessary and a large field is to be desired. The glass should be attached to the person in such a manner that notebook and glass may be quickly, and with as little movement as possible, substitute one for the other. For identifying new birds descriptive blanks are of great advantage. These blanks may be procured from dealers or made by yourself.

As to the third requisite, a book of reference, a number of good books have been published within the last few years, and it is difficult to advise without knowing the extent to which you desire to pursue the study. To name a few of them in order of the simplicity of their use will do no injustice to other good books; Bird Neighbors by Blanchen is good for very popular use, and can be used by children as well as by older people; Bird Craft, by Mrs. Wright, and Bird Life by Chapman are of the very best for study or reading, without reference to an extended study of the birds for use of teachers and others who desire to become well posted in ornithology, and have some leisure to devote to the study; Chapman's Handbook of Birds of Eastern North America is standard, and fully covers the ground that a student, not a specialist, of the birds east of the Rockies would care to go over for at least the first three or four years.

Having the equipment, the time to begin the study may next be considered. Generally speaking, winter time is the best and spring time the worst time to begin. During the winter there are but few birds to become acquainted with, and their habits are learned during the first season devoted seriously to the study; in the spring, during the height of migration, the great number of birds and their close relation to each other create for the beginner a confusion that is apt to be fatal to successful study.

By learning the winter birds and keeping a close lookout for new arrivals they may also be learned the first season, or such of them as you may see; and you may be able to identify most of what birds are seen until the middle of April, when the daily arrivals become too numerous for persons with the ordinary leisure to properly note and study, and it may be necessary to let many that you see go over to another season, and may be several more seasons, before satisfactorily identifying them.

During the winter midday is the best time for making observations; during other seasons the early morning hours are best. Birds have been successfully studied by invalids, not able to leave the house; others have used blinds and allowed the birds to come within their range of vision, but the great majority of observers prefer to go to the bird and get creation with knowledge.

In your book note the date and the hour or hours during which the observations were made, kind of day, temperature; whether clear or cloudy, or raining, direction and force of the wind. The force may be noted as light, fresh, brisk or high. Note the locality in which the observations are made.

When observing never attempt to get a description of the bird while it is between you and the sun; this is a most important rule, always have the sun at your back; otherwise, you get only the outline of the bird without its color or markings. Know as well as you can what sort of description will suit that in your book of reference and enter your notes with the end in view of recording explicitly the points described in your references. Note all of those points and as much else as may interest you. It is very improbable that you will get a good description of the bird at the first sitting. Learn, then, all you can about its habits from books and your own observations; you have made a friend that will afford you pleasure through active life and declining days.

It is difficult to write what the birds say, but the attempt should be made and you should become able to know the bird by its call, note or love song. Its ethical value is then doubled; you may often hear it and recognize it when you have not the time to see it.

It is well to have a list of the birds you may reasonably expect to see at the time in the community. Do not look for Birds of Paradise in North America or any other that is not found in your community.

Through the Audubon Societies most of the States have secured a person who is an authority on the birds in that particular State to act as an advisor to any person beginning the study of birds. So far as I know no such person is accredited to Kentucky; but while I do not feel competent to act as such an advisor, I am at the same time willing to afford any help I can to those beginning the study. One invariable rule is that the one requesting help is to inclose postage for reply where reply is expected.

It was on Colonel Childers' sixtieth birthday that the affair occurred. Some men would have called it an incident, but the colonel insisted upon terming it an affair, and he almost decided that it was of national importance. He had won the Victoria cross for gallant action in India. After his retirement the decoration seldom appeared on his breast. It was brought out only when the Blues or the Horse guards tendered him a little dinner or when there was a meeting of war veterans to praise each other and find fault with the colonels still left in the field.

On this his sixtieth anniversary the Horse guards had announced a banquet in honor of the old veteran, and at the proper hour he left his rooms and made his way by omnibus to their quarters. He had only arrived when he missed his Victoria cross. He felt sure that it had been stolen. During the ride on top of the bus he had had for a fellow passenger a gentle looking man. They had got down at the same time, and the stranger had somehow stumbled against the colonel. The odds were a thousand to one that the cross had been taken at that instant.

The colonel's indignation was so great that he left the banquet behind him and drove to Scotland Yard. He wanted twenty detectives sent out to hunt down the thief. He wanted to know if Britain had an arm to protect her subjects. He wanted a good deal more, and when the Yard officials refused to enthuse he threatened to have the police system of England upset and rebuilt on other plans. Taken altogether, the colonel had rather a bad night of it, and he woke up next morning to vow that he would spend his last dollar to recover the missing medal.

Two weeks passed and the police still reported no clew. In other words, the complaint had been pigeonholed along with hundreds of others of no more im-

DANGEROUS BAKING POWDER

A recent seizure of a lot of "cheap" baking powders by the authorities in a neighboring city, has exposed the character of the low priced brands of baking powders which many manufacturers are offering throughout the country. The price of the powders first attracted attention to them. Samples were taken and analyzed. The official report of the analysis showed the stuff to be "alum powders," composed chiefly of alum, sulphuric acid and puverized rock. The powders were declared dangerous to health and several thousand pounds were confiscated and destroyed.

Physicians have frequently cautioned consumers against mixing food with these so-called "cheap" baking powders. They are all found, when analyzed, to contain large percentages of alum and sulphuric acid, to which are added various sorts of filling matter sometimes both injurious and nasty.

The high class, cream of tartar baking powders are the most economical and wholesome and they should always be selected for use. They will be found cheaper in the end, besides making the food better and most healthful.
